ABANDON ALL HOPE OF RESCUING ALIVE 26 TRAPPED SEAMEN

Now Concentrate Attention On Salvaging The $4,000,000 "Sub"

EMERGENCY IS OVER

Virtually All of 33 Rescued Men Have Recovered From Effects of The Strain

By James L. Kilgallen
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., May 26—(INS)—The Navy today gave up hope of rescuing alive any of the 26 men trapped in the ill-fated submarine Squalus, sunk off Portsmouth, and concentrated its attention upon salvaging the $4,000,000 vessel.

Naval officials, weary after hours of strenuous rescue work at the scene announced at a conference:

"We have finished with emergency life saving and our task now turns to salvage."

Thirty-three of the Squalus' crew of 59 officers and men were rescued. Virtually all of them have completely recovered from the effects of the strain they experienced while awaiting rescue from the Squalus which is imbedded in the mud forty fathoms below the surface of the Atlantic fifteen miles southeast of Portsmouth.

The method of salvage procedure, discussed at a conference were late last night, was submitted for approval today to the Navy Department. The plan to be followed, in what may prove to be weeks of work, will be announced later.

An inquiry to place responsibility for the disaster will be held, probably in Portsmouth, but no date has yet been set for this investigation. Rear Admiral Cyrus W. Cole, commandant of the Portsmouth Navy Yard, who has been in charge of rescue operations, said he "had his own ideas" about the cause of the sinking, but "would rather not say at this time."

Statements of the survivors made to newspaper men indicated that Lieutenant Oliver F. Naquin, commanding officer of the Squalus, who was brought up with the last group of men rescued, also had his own ideas but declined to discuss them.

He did not amplify a statement previously attributed to him, in which it was reported that the sinking was caused because an air induction valve

Announce Statistics For County Prisons

HARRISBURG, May 26—Complete statistics of the movement of population in Pennsylvania county prisons during 1938, issued today by Secretary of Welfare E. Arthur Sweeney, show that 98,831 men and 6,689 women entered the jails. Their maintenance cost the taxpayers approximately $6,000,000.

There were no men or women committed in Pike County, nor females committed in Cameron, Carbon, Forest, Fulton, Juniata, Mercer, Perry, Snyder, Sullivan, Tioga, Union or Wyoming counties.

Of the 105,520 commitments, 31,796 were sentenced by justices of the peace, 27,606 by magistrates, and 10,150 by courts of record. Military courts sentenced 16 men.

At the end of 1938 there were 7,602 persons still in prison, as compared with 7,922 at the beginning of the year. While the total declined, the number of women in prison increased from 418 to 445.

Courts ordered the release of 26,964, which included 1,994 women; 35 men and two women were pardoned; 62 men and two women escaped; 80 men and four women died in prison, while 556 men and 155 women were transferred to mental institutions. Full sentences were served by 38,227 men and 1,872 women. The remainder were transferred to other prisons, paroled, or their sentences were commuted.

Prisoners received from Bucks County were 887 men; 16 women, or a total of 903.

RETURN KUHN, BUND HEAD, TO N. Y. AFTER HIS ARREST

Dewey Describes Prisoner As "Just A Common Thief"

TO ASK FOR HIGH BAIL

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK, May 26—Fritz Kuhn, burly Fuehrer of the pro-Nazi German-American bund, was returned to New York from Pennsylvania early today for a police line-up and felony court arraignment on an indictment charging him with stealing $14,548 of the bund's funds.

District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, who described Kuhn as "just a common thief," was prepared to ask for high bail.

Overtaken at the hamlet of Krumsville by three detectives from Dewey's office, Kuhn waived extradition and was returned immediately. He was booked and spent the night at the police station.

Kuhn faced a possible maximum term of 50 years on the 12-point indictment upon conviction. The Grand Jury indicted him as he was traveling westward with three bund leaders who insisted they were en route to Chicago and Milwaukee for speeches. Asked whether he regarded Kuhn's journey as a flight, Dewey replied:

"It looks very much like it."

Kuhn had been under surveillance the past several days after he refused to waive immunity and testify before the Grand Jury. Dewey's men decided to follow him yesterday after learning he had picked up three traveling bags at different points in New York. When Kuhn pulled up his car at a Krumsville gas station to load three trunks previously left there, Dewey's men telephoned New York, learned that the indictment had been returned in the interim and were instructed to arrest the bund leader.

The first two counts of the indictment charge Kuhn stole $8,907 of the proceeds of the Madison Square Garden rally of the bund last February 20.

The next two counts charge he avoided himself of an additional $4,424 of the bund's allied German-American Settlement League.

The fifth and sixth counts allege Kuhn took another $556 to pay for transporting the furniture of Mrs. Florence Camp from Los Angeles to New York and thence to Cleveland. Dewey said Mrs. Camp is the buxom blonde who was recently photographed at Kuhn's side at the New York World's Fair. The remaining counts accuse Kuhn of further embezzlements.

Honor Local Miss At Shower in Trenton, N. J.

Miss Augustine Asta, Lincoln avenue, was tendered a surprise miscellaneous shower Tuesday evening at the Venice Cafe, Trenton, N. J. 75 guests from Bristol and Trenton attending. Miss Asta was presented with many gifts.

The evening was enjoyed dancing to the strains of a Hawaiian orchestra. The hall was decorated in pink and blue, and suspended from the ceiling was an open umbrella, trimmed in the same colors, with gifts placed underneath. Refreshments were served. The shower was given by Miss Dorothy Dowd, Trenton, N. J.

TO HOLD BAKE SALE

Boy Scout Troop No. 1 will hold a bake sale in the Primary Room of the Bristol Presbyterian Church tomorrow at 10.30 a. m. The proceeds of the sale will be used to send members of the Troop to the New York World's Fair. All contributions and purchases will be appreciated.

A Time of Reunions

(By "The Stroller")
A visitor to any of the many cemeteries in this section of Bucks County these days will see small groups eagerly conversing, here and there throughout the burial plots.

These are reunions on a small scale, which are looked forward to annually at the Memorial season, when so many families return to decorate graves of loved ones. There they meet others whom they knew a few or many years ago. Old acquaintances are renewed, and old times reviewed.

Countless people look forward to Memorial Day when they might thus greet scores of friends whom they have not seen for long periods of time.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

Because some of the girls in Doylestown wanted a club, a Camp Fire Girls group has been formed under the guardianship of Mrs. Mabel Elliott, eighth grade teacher of Doylestown school.

The group will meet on Wednesday evenings at seven o'clock, and any girls who wish to join should notify Mrs. Elliott. Any church organization that has a meeting room and is willing to let it be used for this group, it is announced, should notify Mrs. Robert Goeller, 142 East Court street.

Sponsors of the group are Mrs. John H. Elfman and Mrs. Robert Goeller.

This group will be a part of the Trenton Council, so that it may take part in the big council fire and have the opportunity to attend the Summer camp operated by the Trenton headquarters.

Holding their second sale in their new building, at Doylestown, the Bucks County Producers' Co-operative Association Poultry Auction on Tuesday sold 500 coops of chickens. Manager William H. Gwinner reported today.

The sale, which is the largest on record, is the high-water mark and was held in the new plant in the annex, Doylestown.

Manager Gwinner stated that the next poultry auction sale will be held on Wednesday, May 31.

Although the sale, which was to have been held on Memorial Day was cancelled, Manager Gwinner this morning announced that plans have been changed and it will take place next Wednesday.

The National Farm School has sold to the Venezuela Government three head of blue blood cattle, one of which is to be shipped from Baltimore next Friday, and the other two on June 26.

The three animals, consisting of two bulls and one heifer, are three outstanding animals raised and bred by National Farm School. Outstanding among the shipment is the Guernsey bull, "Farm School Connie Boy," sired by "Farm School Good Boy" and out of the cow, "Robin Run's Cornelia."

According to the school's dairy department head, "Robin Run's Cornelia" is one of the outstanding Guernseys in the school's famous herd, having made a record of 11,941 pounds of milk and 608 pounds of fat at 12 years of age. She also has a milk record of 100,000 pounds of milk for her lifetime.

In addition to the Guernsey bull, the Venezuela Government has also purchased an Ayrshire bull, "Farm School"

MISSIONARY EAGER TO REASSUME HER DUTIES

Mrs. Minnie P. Anderson, of Morrisville, Would Love To Return To India

IS NOW 71 YEARS OLD

MORRISVILLE, May 26—Eagerly would she re-assume her duties in the mission field of India, if she could, states Mrs. Minnie P. Anderson, 415 Woodland avenue, who discontinued her duties as missionary two years ago. This is Mrs. Anderson's attitude in spite of the fact she suffered many privations and hardships.

Back in the cowboy and real Indian days, Mrs. Anderson, then Miss Minnie Parks, was born in Kansas. She went to a small school for three and one-half months per year, traveling from her home each day on broncos. In Pawnee City, Neb., Mrs. Anderson finished high school and began teaching in Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska and Colorado. After instructing grammar grades for five years, she obtained a position as clerk for a lawyer. Shortly afterward, being interested in missionary work, as was her entire family before her, she was sent by the United Presbyterian Church to Sialkot, India, in the Punjab Province.

There she met William T. Anderson, also a missionary, and three years later they were married. Mrs. Anderson relates how she and her husband went from village to village with their little entourage, instructing and preaching Christianity. Mr. Anderson at one time suffered from the dreaded bubonic plague and was very ill. Twenty-six miles from a railroad in the dense India jungle, she nursed one of her nine children and cared for her husband at the same time. One of the youngsters didn't get along

Granzow Dance Revue To Occur Here Tonight

The tiny dancers, those in the adolescent stage, and those approaching maturity, are eager to do their "turn" tonight in the Granzow Dance Revue at the Grand Theatre. And the public is just as eager for the evening hour which will herald an outstanding program of dance numbers by those who are clever at the art, under direction of Miss Sara Granzow.

Two acts are arranged under the caption of "Today and Tomorrow" with 45 numbers in all. Pianists are Blanche Washburn and Olive Winslow.

School Eta's Joe," bred and raised at the Bucks county institution and out of the cow "Sycamore Eta."

"Sycamore Eta" is a cow that has been selected by the Ayrshire Breeders' Association to be exhibited in the "Dairy World of Tomorrow" at the New York World's Fair. This cow was sent to New York a month ago and will return to Farm School in the late Fall. She has a production record of 11,151 pounds of milk and 457 pounds fat as a two-year-old.

One of the interesting facts connected with the purchasing of the animals by the Venezuela Government is that they will only buy dark red cattle, because they stand the excessive heat better and are resistant to screw worm infestation, which is prevalent in that country.

PHILA. POLICE SEEK REPUTED "FAITH HEALER"

Say Wanted Individual Is Believed to Have Been Accomplish in Arsenic Ring

RODIO HELD MINUS BAIL

By International News Service

PHILADELPHIA, May 26—With the 15th alleged "black widow" held without bail for the Grand Jury in connection with Philadelphia's bizarre insurance-murder ring, G-men today sought a mysterious, reputed "faith healer" woman accomplice.

The latest suspect, Mrs. Grace Giovannetti, 45, was accused in the purported arsenic death of her former husband, Pietro Pioroli who died in April, 1935. According to investigators, the other woman being sought on a fugitive warrant is a "faith healer," while Mrs. Giovannetti is said to be a fortune teller. "This woman," asserted Capt. James Kelly of the homicide squad at a hearing, "gave a statement involving herself, Mrs. Rose Carina, Herman Petrillo and an unknown person." Petrillo has been convicted and doomed to death by a jury, while Mrs. Carina is held as the "kiss of death" woman assertedly involved in the conspiracy.

At the same time Dominick Rodio, seized in Cleveland last week, was also held without bail in connection with the drowning of Joseph Arena off Sea Isle City, N. J. New Jersey State police and Police Chief Jesse Souder, of Cape May courthouse, had asked that Rodio be held for New Jersey authorities.

Dramatic highlight was the mass-murder arraignment of 19 recently-indicted arsenic suspects—seven men and three women. Three of the men—Morris Boiber, fake "faith healer," Salvatore Sorino, arrested in the drowning of Ralph Caruso, and Ralph Polsell, so-called errand boy of the conspiracy—pleaded guilty, while all others denied complicity in the various deaths charged against them.

Mass trials of members of the ring believed responsible for more than 100 deaths for insurance were reported set for next Monday.

ANNOUNCE MARRIAGE

Announcement is made of the marriage of William Bossler, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Bossler, 561 01st street, and Miss Eleanor Metzler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Metzler, Trenton, N. J., on Monday, May 15th, in St. Mary's Cathedral, Trenton, N. J. Mr. and Mrs. Bossler are now residing in their apartment on Bristol Pike, where Mr. Bossler operates a garage service.

They Never Retract

Washington, May 25. THE smart young men who prepare the data upon which Mr. Roosevelt bases his speeches, and who help in their construction, are sometimes more enthusiastic than accurate. In their zeal to make a point they not infrequently lead the President into loose statements which cannot be sustained.

THERE have been many such in the last seven years and it is illuminating that while they have always been challenged, in no instance has there been retraction, modification or correction. In launching his earliest experiments, Mr. Roosevelt generously promised to be the first to admit mistake. But none has yet been admitted.

Anxious To See Son

Philadelphia, May 26—(INS)—Mrs. Emma C. Bergdoll, 78-year-old mother of the notorious World War draft dodger, dried her tears today and awaited some word from the fugitive she has not seen for nearly two decades.

Informed of Grover's return and arrest in New York at her farm in suburban Broomall, Mrs. Bergdoll wept. "Are they going to put him in jail?" she asked over and over again. "Why do they have to put him in jail?" sobbed the aged woman. "He is not a criminal. He has done nothing wrong, and I hope the American people will be lenient with him."

Ready for Governor's Signature

Harrisburg, May 26—Bills authorizing the State to take over the Delaware Division of the Pennsylvania Canal in Bucks County, were ready for the Governor's signature today.

Final approval was given to both bills by the House late yesterday. One bill allows the Department of Forests and Waters to take over the canal for park purposes, and the other permits the Department of Forests and Waters to transfer any portion of the area not needed for park purposes to the highway department.

According to Representative Thomas H. Stockham, Republican, Bucks County, one of the sponsors, the portion of the canal between Easton and Morrisville will be devoted to park purposes and that from Morrisville to Bristol will be given to the Highway Department. He told the House that revenues received from the sale of water along the canal route will almost serve to meet the cost of maintaining the park section.

UNCONSCIOUS FOR 36 HOURS; HIT BY AUTO

Lawrence Rhodes, 20, Headley Manor, Has Fracture Of the Skull

INJURED ON WEDNESDAY

Unconscious for the past 36 hours, Lawrence Rhodes, 20, of Headley Manor, Bristol Township, is a patient in Harriman Hospital, having suffered serious injuries when hit by an automobile Wednesday evening.

A fractured skull, incised wound on the back of his head requiring six stitches; contusions of the left shoulder, right hip, and lower parts of both legs, are being treated at the institution.

The youth was struck by an automobile operated by Howard Bintliff, Edgely avenue, Headley Manor, at 10.50 p. m., Wednesday, as Rhodes was walking along a thoroughfare at Green Lane. Rhodes was accompanying a friend who was riding a bicycle at the time, and it is stated he was walking in the same direction as traffic.

He was thrown into the air by the impact, and then struck the machine, according to the report made out at the hospital.

Highway patrolmen from Oxford Valley barracks of Pennsylvania Motor police investigated.

ARTS, CRAFTS DISPLAY ARRANGED ON MILL ST

Countless Items for The Home Made by Pupils of Washington St. School

STUDYING "THE HOME"

With the subject of "The Home" studied during this school term by students of classes in Washington street public school, and academic work correlated with that subject, the pupils have been enabled to present a splendid array of arts and crafts works in the show-room of C. W. Winter, Mill and Wood streets.

Utilizing discarded boxes, tin cans, pictures; and also mill ends of wool, etc., the girls and boys have executed scores of fine pieces of which they may well be proud. The display will remain at this business place for a few days, so the public might view the work of this school term. The articles are sold to the pupils and public, and the funds derived are used to replenish supplies.

191 Are Served at Elks' 34th Anniversary Banquet

For the first time in the history of Bristol Lodge, No. 970, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, was the Honorable Howard I. James unable to carry out his duties as toastmaster, when the 34th annual dinner of the lodge was conducted here. Senator James was unavoidably detained by his duties in Harrisburg, and his post was filled at the banquet by J. Leslie Kilcoyne, Esq.

A telegram was received from Senator James in which he expressed keen regret upon missing an anniversary banquet, this being the first he has been unable to attend in the entire history of the lodge.

One hundred and ninety-one were served at the dinner in the rathskellar of the Elks home, with vocal solos by a Philadelphia woman, and group singing being enjoyed.

Six acts by professional entertainers pleased after the group adjourned to the social session room. Brief addresses were made by the retiring exalted ruler, John Smoyer, 3rd, and by the new exalted ruler, Wilson C. Smith.

To the retiring exalted ruler, Mr. Smoyer, a gold watch was presented by Mr. Kilcoyne on behalf of the lodge. Eleven charter members were present for the function.

Bill Awaits House Concurrence

Harrisburg, May 26—A bill fixing an elevation of a dike along the Delaware River at Morrisville, today awaited House concurrence on Senate amendments before being sent to the Governor.

The Senate amendment of the House approved bill would require that the dike's over-all height at the abutment of the Trenton avenue bridge be 32 rather than 30 feet and 28 rather than 27 feet at the abutment of the Bridge street bridge.

The bill, which is sponsored by Representative Thomas B. Stockham, Republican, Bucks, passed the Senate, 36-0.

CONVICTED, BUT THE JURY RECOMMENDS MERCY IN THE CASE

Earl J. Nuss, Sellersville, Found Guilty of Involuntary Manslaughter

ANOTHER ON TRIAL

Chas. Voyton, Nanticoke, Pa., Goes on Trial for Involuntary Manslaughter

DOYLESTOWN, May 26—Earl J. Nuss, of Sellersville, a lunch wagon clerk, was convicted of involuntary manslaughter yesterday in the Bucks county criminal court, but the jury recommended mercy.

Nuss was arrested after his automobile had hit and killed John Purdy, Hilltown Township, on the night of April 15, on the Bethlehem pike. Purdy was standing alongside of his automobile when he was struck by the Nuss car. Nuss's attorney, Robert E. Grim, Perkassie, made an application for a new trial and Nuss was released under renewed bail.

Charles Voyton, 23, of 250 West Church street, Nanticoke, Pa., went on trial yesterday afternoon before a jury in Judge Hiram H. Keller's Court, charged with involuntary manslaughter, growing out of the death of Edgar O. Garrett, 40, of Elkins Park, a former resident of New Britain, Bucks county, and a deputy clerk in the United States District Court.

Garrett was instantly killed while driving from Easton on his way home to Elkins Park. His car and a 12-ton truck driven by Voyton, collided on Ferndale hill on the Lackawanna Trail. Voyton jumped out of the cab of his truck after the crash and the truck continued on for a short distance. Voyton was seriously injured and rushed to the Easton Hospital, where he was a patient for some time.

Private Thomas A. Lawler, of the Doylestown sub-station of Motor Police, who was assisted in the investigation by Private Good, was the first witness for the Commonwealth. He stated that the defendant drove a truck-tractor job loaded with 12½

"Dave" Landreth Tells Rotarians About Baseball

"Dave" Landreth, owner and manager of the Landreth baseball team, one of the outstanding ball clubs in this section, told the Bristol Rotarians yesterday afternoon, when he addressed them at the regular weekly meeting in the Presbyterian Church here, that "whenever you see a professional baseball game, regardless of the calibre of that particular game, you are seeing the best baseball and the best players obtainable in action."

A good attendance was on hand to hear Landreth's talk, including several visiting Rotarians from Ambler, Lester D. Thorne, president of the club, was in the chair. Club singing was led by Ernest Gamble. Dr. John J. Hargrave, Rotary representative of the Borough Fourth of July celebration committee, gave a report to the members.

Mr. Landreth explained to the group how players are developed and trained for the major leagues. First they are scouted by big league scouts and if sufficient promise is shown they are signed. The next step is usually some playing in a class D league, then a C league, then a B league, which is one of the important minor leagues, and then the major leagues.

"Players continue to receive instruction as they move toward the top. On some occasions the players move directly to the major leagues, but this is not the general practice."

"We have had four men placed in the big leagues who formerly played with our team,"

MAN WITHOUT A COUNTRY

Several generations of school children have been brought up on the story of "The Man Without A Country." Future generations may find as powerful a lesson in current history as their predecessors did in Edward Everett Hale's masterpiece of fiction.

Grover Cleveland Bergdoll is a spiritual descendant of Philip Nolan, who according to the famous tale vowed he never wanted to see the United States again. Bergdoll engaged in no conspiracy against the United States; his crime was fleeing the country to escape the penalty of desertion during wartime. Had he stayed to serve his term, he would have recovered his citizenship in a few years. Instead, he has been an exile in Germany for about two decades.

Life in Germany, even under the republic, could not have been very cheerful for him. The label of slack or followed him like an avenging fury. Now that the Nazis are in control, he would like to make sure that his children are admitted to United States citizenship. To gain that end, he has returned to his native land to serve out the five-year sentence imposed on him.

Unfortunately for Bergdoll, the House of Representatives has just passed without a dissenting vote a bill to prohibit the re-entry to this country, either temporarily or permanently, of any person who, convicted of desertion from the United States armed forces during wartime, went to a foreign country to escape punishment.

Unless Bergdoll has taken out citizenship papers in Germany, he actually will be a man without a country if the Senate approves this bill and the president signs it. Perhaps, too, the legislators suspect his change of heart is not entirely due to revived patriotism. When he left so abruptly, he forfeited half a million dollars' worth of property to the Federal Government. The hope of reclaiming this may be part of his motive.

The story has its pathetic side. Bergdoll's wife and children have come to this country hoping for reunion of the family, with citizenship required. Whatever their fate, Bergdoll is still a man without a country.

NEW COURSES IN THE OLD

Much of the dither about changes in the curriculum of high schools and colleges may prove to be gratuitous worrying. It is true that vocational education is making some inroads on the hours which used to be given over for the study of the classics, but in the opinion of many prominent educators this development is in the right direction, shaking into wakefulness the pedagogues and students who got into the habit of drowsing over their Analyses and Cicero and so wasted much of the valuable and all-too-short time of youth's period for study.

In answer to those who deplore the curtailment of courses in the ancient languages, a group of leading educators has made public its consensus of opinion that there is nothing to worry about and that the study of old languages and old races, upon which modern civilization is built, is in no danger of being erased from the programs of education in the present day.

of the whole is owned by banks. Comparatively few individuals own Government bonds. "Consequently," says Senator Byrd, "the vast majority of the people must pay taxes to pay interest to the small number of individuals and banks owning the bonds." This directly contradicts Mr. Roosevelt's assertion.

The other point made by the President is that a large part of the national debt is offset by recoverable debts owed the Government. This Senator Byrd flatly denies. The fact is that only an inconsequential part of the debt is offset in that way. And the figures prove it. Figures also refute the astounding Roosevelt statement that the regular departments of the Government "cost less now than they did under my predecessor." The smart young men arrive at this conclusion because they have adopted a method of accounting different from that ever before in governmental use. The Hoover method showed all money taken in on one side and all outlays and obligations on the other. The Roosevelt method does not do this. What it does is eliminate and segregate certain large items which give an appearance of less expenditure. However, when the expenditures are adjusted and measured by the same yardstick the picture is very different.

A RECENT analysis made by "Constitutional Publications" gives the figures and summarizes its conclusions as follows: (1) "The irrecoverable expenditures of the Hoover four fiscal years, 1930-1933, inclusive, were 12,427 million dollars. Similar Roosevelt expenditures for four fiscal years, 1937-1940, inclusive, actual and budgeted, are 34,219 million dollars. This is over 250 per cent of the Hoover expenditures. Mr. Roosevelt's attacks upon Mr. Hoover's expenditures and his promise to reduce them 25 per cent, are singularly unjustified by the facts. Had Mr. Roosevelt's promises been carried out his expenditures for these four years would be about 10 billion dollars instead of 34 billion dollars."

(2) "THE second conclusion is that the increase in Roosevelt irrecoverable expenditures has taken place in every single branch of Government, except the veterans. It is not solely due to relief and social measures, as is claimed. An increase of nearly six billion annually in six years over Hoover expenditures in 1933 surely offers substantial area for safe reduction.

"The third conclusion is the great expansion of taxation. The taxes and other income collected in the Hoover four fiscal years, 1930-1933, inclusive, were 11,325 million dollars. Similar Roosevelt collections, actual or budgeted for the four years, 1937-1940, inclusive, are 22,725 million dollars. This is 200 per cent of the Hoover figure."

"THE fourth conclusion is that the deficit in the Hoover Administration was obviously due to fall in taxes, not increase in expenses. If Hoover had imposed the same taxes on the country as Roosevelt has, he would have had a surplus of 9,298 million dollars and would have thus wiped out over half the national debt of that time."

In the light of these figures, the Roosevelt assertion that "it cost less to run the regular government now than under my predecessor" becomes too preposterous to discuss. Yet that is the kind of statement which the smart young men regularly insert in the speeches and which are never retracted, modified or corrected.

On Sunday at three, seven and nine p. m. in the Music Pavilion, Frankie Schluth will present a sparkling All Star Show including those two laugh-provoking "nuts," Jed Dooley and Andree Evans... Shanghai Wing Troppe's "A Night in the Orient"... radio's sensational Jitterbug Sherrill Sisters... Murray and Raymond in a whistling tour... and the Mater Brothers' "A Study in Balance." At the same hours on Decoration Day, May 30th, Frankie will present an entirely new and different All Star Stage Show. On Decoration Day there will also be offered rollerskating, dancing and numerous other special features.

A special Memorial Day program to honor our hallowed illustrious dead will be held in Willow Grove Park's Music Pavilion on May 30th at 10 a. m. under the auspices of American Legion Liberty Post, No. 308, with Commander Alfred G. Garrison in charge.

"AIR MAIL BRIDE" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

SYNOPSIS

Marie Alexander, young and unsophisticated, satisfies her longing for romance by corresponding via a letter exchange club with a young man she had never seen. When Edward Wilson, the correspondent, visits her, Marie is filled with misgivings that he will not care for her. To impress him, she had written that her mother was an actress, and so she had been years ago, but now she conducts a beauty parlor in their home on the outskirts of Hollywood. Marie runs a circulating library there. The young couple meet and are mutually attracted and, after only two days' courtship, profess their love. Edward is to leave on business in two days and suggests that they marry secretly before he goes. And so, they do. After wiring Julie that their car broke down and that Marie will spend the night with friends, the newlyweds stay at an unromantic auto camp.

CHAPTER IX

"But I've got to tell mother," the new Mrs. Wilson said firmly. "I've got to."

"I know how you feel, honey, but listen! This is a secret wedding. Of course, it's a secret. We won't tell anyone else. Just mother and Charlie. I've got to tell them."

Silence from the bridegroom. "Darling, she's so good, and she loves me so, and when we think of that wire we sent last night I could weep. I couldn't go on living that lie. I feel bad enough about it as it is, but if I could tell her the truth now, it would help. She'll understand. She'll be nice about it, you don't have to be afraid that she won't."

"We said we'd keep it secret," he repeated stubbornly. "Of course, dear! But just mother and Charlie?"

"What about my mother and dad. Don't they count?"

He smiled a little, she looked at him so blankly. His mother and dad. Somehow she'd never thought of them. Edward had parents, of course. Everybody has parents. But it was hard to think of Edward's parents. He was independent as a shooting star.

She wet her lips. "Why, of course, we'll tell them, too."

Mollified, but still reluctant, he agreed. "All right, we'll tell your folks because you want to—but I'm afraid it will lead to all kinds of trouble. And we won't tell mine, because they're up north, and they're not going to suspect anything."

So she was happy again, and everything was perfect.

She fairly flung herself from the car when Edward brought it to a stop at 657 Dover street. In the excitement of getting back, and being married, and getting ready to tell Julie all about it, she'd almost forgotten that Edward would leave that very night.

And then, as she started up the steps with her, she began to think... Julie's temper... things might be said... "Edward, you won't mind—but I think it will be better for me to go in alone."

"No, it's my place to tell her."

"Please, darling. I want to talk to her first."

He really wanted to do the manly thing, but he couldn't help being relieved. "Well—if you think so. I really ought to get the car back to the boys. This afternoon's their last chance to do anything with it. We're leaving right after ten tonight. Press has to be at work at eight-thirty tomorrow morning."

"Edward—I CAN'T let you go!" Now she was going to cry again, too.

which would be a poor way to break the news. With red eyes... Why, her mother'd think he'd kidnapped her or something. She might be peeping out of a window now. "Now, honey! Don't! Take it smiling! And you've got to look happy when you tell your mother. And I'll see you again before I leave. We'll have a little time together."

"Edward! Edward, wait! Come to dinner. Mother wanted you to come that first night, but I wanted to be alone with you. Come tonight. Please!"

"I'll come. Six-thirty all right?"

Her mother looked as if she'd been crying, too, and Mr. Bronson, whom they both called Charlie, was plainly ill at ease.

"Sit down, sit down," he told Edward, piloting him to the book nook where Marie had her library. "Dinner isn't quite ready and Marie will be helping her mother in the kitchen."

Edward sat down. Presently he offered Charlie a cigarette, because he felt he had to have one himself. "No, thanks," Charlie said, "I have my pipe." He drew it from his baggy coat pocket, blew in it, stuffed it

"I hear you folks got married yesterday," Charlie said.

Marie watched until the car turned the corner. Soon she'd have to watch him drive away, and know that he wouldn't be coming back for dinner. Wouldn't be coming back for months, perhaps for a year.

She wiped her eyes, and went in. Julie had a customer in the shop. "Is that you, Marie?" she called. Marie said yes, and waited. Nothing happened. Julie went on talking to the customer.

Marie went upstairs to wait. She was surprised to see that everything looked the same. But of course she'd only been away a day.

She went to the dresser, and took off her hat, patting her hair at the mirror. She looked the same, too. Not a bit changed. Just the way she did when she was Marie Alexander.

She turned to see her mother in the doorway. Julie's large, soft face was flushed. She wore a little white rubber apron over her orchid uniform. "I see you're back," she said in a voice that didn't sound like her own.

And Marie gave a little sob, and flung herself into the familiar comfort of the plump, orchid arms.

"Oh, mother! Mother! We're married. Edward and I. I married him yesterday, in Las Vegas!"

Edward saw at a glance that Marie had been crying. She'd changed into a yellow silk sport dress, and her hair was frayed and curly, and she had put on a lot of powder and lipstick, but it didn't from a flat blue can he took from another pocket. "I hear you folks got married yesterday."

"Yes," Edward said, "we got married."

He was listening for Marie. He hoped she wouldn't leave him alone with her stepfather very long. "Well, that's the way of the world. Marriage and giving in marriage," Charlie said. He took a long draw on his pipe.

Edward puffed on his cigarette. "Folks live in Frisco?"

"Oakland."

"Oh, Oakland." Charlie took another long draw. "Not so much fog there as Frisco, I guess. Climate's a shade better. Though, after our climate he'd naturally feel it some. Let's cold up there, I hear."

"I beg your pardon?"

"What's that?"

"I'm sorry. I didn't hear just what you said."

Charlie looked at the young man his stepdaughter had just married. He felt sorry for him. He decided not to mention the climate. After all, some people might really like it in San Francisco and Oakland—people who had never had the opportunity of living in southern California, of course. "Well," he said at length, "young folks will marry. That's what I told the wife."

"Was she very angry?"

"Who? Julie? Oh, well, now I wouldn't exactly say as she—well! you know how women folks are."

well and a goat had to be added to the family for its milk.

During the winter season, Mrs. Anderson and other women doing missionary work would retire to the mountains with their families because of the intense heat. The heat was so great that to stay in the lowland district would be fatal to the children. Even early in the morning or past midnight the thermometer registered over 100 degrees.

The evangelic group, consisting of about 15 persons, including cook, watchman, horseman and the missionaries, lived in tents and traveled on camels and buggies. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson and family had many harrowing experiences throughout their travels.

The rivers were perilous, especially after a heavy rain. Once, when crossing one of these shallow but treacherous streams lined with quicksand, the harness was ripped and broken from the neck of the animal and the buggy left stranded in the rising current. One of the natives did heroic work in rescuing Mrs. Anderson and her children in the absence of her husband.

Snakes and leopards also played important roles in their journeys. Mrs. Anderson tells of native boys playing with and teasing snakes. One night, when Mrs. Anderson was in the Himalaya Mountains and her husband was engaged in missionary work on the lowlands, she came out of her tent and found a large snake coiled near the lantern outside.

A leopard, another night, snatched a dog off the porch of a neighbor when several persons were about. They never took long walks with dogs, for fear the animal scent would attract the spotted beasts.

During the first 20 years, Mr. and Mrs. Anderson worked among the Hindus, or low caste of India. The last 20 was spent instructing the Moslems, or believers in Mohammedanism. People belonging to the lower caste, aren't even allowed to touch food to be eaten by the upper group, Mrs. Anderson said.

After a year of illness, Mr. Anderson died, and six years after Mrs. Anderson and her family came to New York City. Eight of her nine children were born in India. One boy is now in Africa doing missionary work and two girls are in India. Three of the family are ministers and another a bridge builder.

When asked whether she'd like to go back to India, Mrs. Anderson, now 71 years old, said, "I'd love to. Even with the privations I suffered, I'm very satisfied."

She is a member of the First Presbyterian Church here.

Mrs. Anderson's youngest daughter, Miss Betty Anderson, is a teacher in Morrisville High School, instructing in French and English. Miss Anderson was born in India, but was sent to the United States after seven years because she was unable to stand the malaria climate. She has been teaching here for four years.

the home more attractive, convenient and comfortable.

The hooked rugs are made of mill ends of wool, and the designs attract the passerby. There are rag rugs woven on a loom; and from smaller looms come scarfs, etc. Used socks are utilized for making dolls, and from cheese boxes evolve sewing tables, gaily painted. From discarded wooden boxes, doll furniture is made, with the linen items and blankets for the beds being sewn.

Much furniture has come from the "shop" this year, including end tables, magazine racks, towel racks, children's chairs, book-ends, nick-nack shelves—and all are attractively painted. One of the children's chairs is enhanced with a cat at the front of either arm; and red book-ends feature two monkeys, one pulling the other's tail.

Those adept at sewing have fashioned peasant aprons, boleros of felt embroidered in wool, pot holders, and many other items. The students who enjoy crocheting have made numerous dollies; and those who enjoy knitting have made sweaters. There is a baby's set consisting of a blanket and cap, of blue and white "weave-it" blocks.

From pieces of cork, table coasters have appeared in a short space of time; and there are several book-ends which have the appearance of hammered copper or silver. In reality these have a wooden backing with gold or silver foil stretched over the frame, then designs worked on the same. There are bracelets of many kinds of materials and styles.

A foot stool boasts a woven rope top; there are belts made of pieces of colored felt, intertwined; and little old-fashioned ladies to be used as pin holders or pen wipers. Sugar and flour scoops are made from tin cans. Reed is used for weaving baskets; and leather for making some of the belts.

There are 65 students in the four rooms at the Washington street building, with the groups in charge of the Misses Elizabeth Forsythe, Elizabeth Evans, Christie Appleby; and Harold Storms.

CONSIDER SPECIFIC USE WHEN SHOPPING FOR PAINT FOR HOME

By Miss Edna Stephany

(Home Economics Representative) Beginning with the consumer end of the paint problem, paints can be classified according to what they are to be used for. For exteriors, there are house and barn paints to apply to important surfaces like siding and shingles. Trim and trellis paints, or exterior enamels, find their proper use on the less important blinds, window sashes, and casings. Porch and deck paints give hard surfaces that stand up under mechanical wear and weathering. Shingle stains naturally are used for shingles but also for other rough woodwork where a color that does not entirely conceal the wood is desired. Spar varnish, named for its suitability for masts and spars of ships, supplies the land-lubber's need for a coating for the front door or for an exterior coating that protects and yet shows the wood. Metal, brick, and concrete all have their special paints.

Interior surfaces similarly have paints that meet specific requirements. For use on plaster and wall-boards there are wall paints—gloss, semi-gloss, and flat. Where a less expensive paint is desired, casein paints and calcimines are useful for these surfaces. Plastic paints are available to make textured surfaces. Consumers who are sensitive to noise can get sound-deadening acoustic paint. For interior trim there are architectural paints, enamels, and varnishes. For floors there are floor paints, floor varnishes, floor seals, floor oils, and floor waxes.

First lesson in the consumer's paint textbook is to use paints for the purposes for which they are intended. Most paint labels tell what the paints are made for. To disregard the manufacturer's advice in this is to invite trouble. An excellent house paint may be unsuitable for an interior wall or ceiling and a fine interior enamel is likely to prove disastrous on the outside of a front door.

Paints with overboastful labels and advertising, claiming superlative merit for practically all kinds of service, should be regarded with suspicion. The jack-of-all-trades is usually master of none. It is safer to stick to paints that are recommended for specific purposes, and the more specific the better.

On the edge of the paint and varnish business, too, there are concerns that sell concoctions to be added to paints which claim to make them go farther, last longer, and wear better. A good rule to follow here is to add nothing to a paint but what the manufacturer recommends on the label. Then if the paint turns out to be a poor one the consumer can complain to his paint dealer with a clear conscience.

Paste paint is concentrated paint that must be thinned with a good deal of liquid before it is ready to apply. Prepared paint is ready to apply as a finish paint as soon as it is stirred thoroughly.

On the basis of color, paints are divided into white paints, tinted paints, and colored pigment paints.

Most paint failures that are caused by faulty application or maintenance come from (1) the painter's ignorance of the kind of paint he is using, (2) the failure to space painting in accordance with the kind of paint used, and (3) from using different kinds of paint for successive paint jobs.

Personality Tax Yield Shows A Big Drop

HARRISBURG, May 26.—Levy of State tax on personal property has had the indirect effect of adding a considerable volume of taxable property to the tax rolls of Pennsylvania's counties but the yield declined almost $3,000,000 in 1938 from the 1937 total. Secretary of Internal Affairs William S. Livingston, Jr., announced today after a study of this tax levy as it has affected county receipts from 1935 to 1938, inclusive.

In 1935 Bucks County's total was $95,023; in 1936 it was $115,449; in 1937 it dropped to $174,770, and in 1938 it dropped again to $140,608.

Livingston said his department is studying these figures to ascertain the causes for the drop in revenue last year.

Before this State tax levy on intangibles became effective in 1935, the counties made a combined levy of $9,231,265 on the personal property of their residents. In June of that year the State levy of four mills was enacted and the assessment of this tax early in 1936 served to add taxables to the county rolls which brought the combined levy for 1936 to a total of $11,662,610.

Amendments in 1936 required all taxables to file duplicate returns with the Department of Revenue and provided for transfer of these duplicate returns to the respective counties. This co-operative effort resulted in a further increase in the county levy to a total of $14,979,240 in 1937.

However, it is noticeable that this peak has not been maintained. The total dropped back in 1938 to $12,000,397, apparently due in part, at least, to a downward trend in the assessed value of intangibles.

tons of canned goods. He testified that he questioned Voyton in the Eastern Hospital on January 25, six days after the accident when he told him that his name was Adam Voyton. (The defendant's name is Charles Voyton; Adam is his brother.)

"When I asked Voyton about the accident, he stated that all he could remember was coming up the Doylestown hill, which is 19 miles away from the scene of the accident," Private Lawler stated. "He told me that he did not remember anything after that until he woke up in the Eastern Hospital the day after the accident."

"Voyton told me that he left Kingston, Pa., at midnight on January 18 and drove to Bridgeton, N. J., where he arrived on the 19th and had his truck loaded with canned goods; that he left Bridgeton at 10 in the morning of January 19 and headed back to Kingston. His brother, he told me, drove another truck, and they stopped at Doylestown for lunch between 1 and 2 on the 19th. The accident happened a short time after that."

Private Lawler testified that when he arrived at the scene of the accident, he noticed broken parts of an automobile along the highway, oil marks and other dirty snow and ice.

Oscar Stone, of Ferndale, said the accident happened about 3 p. m. that it was a cold day and the road was bare in the middle but the sides were covered with ice and snow. Stone was walking home when he heard the crash and looked back.

Angelo Marchetti, 23, of 131 Anderson street, Trenton, N. J., a former Bristol resident, was sentenced by Judge Calvin S. Boyer to serve from nine months to three years, and pay the costs of his case. The jury deliberated one hour, Marchetti having been arrested on a charge of assault and battery and attempt to ravish. The charge was lodged by Mrs. Joan Flatbush, 21, of 230 Otter street, Bristol, who was a passenger in Marchetti's car.

Judge Boyer denounced the type of young man who comes into Bucks County with the idea of debauching girls. He pointed out that so many such come in contact with the law in Bucks County, the county being located between the cities of Philadelphia and Trenton. "There is not the slightest excuse for believing that we can conduct ourselves in such manner and get away with it," added Judge

Boyer in imposing sentence. Edward Cernok, 27, of Shelly, pleaded guilty to drunken driving, and was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and costs.

Four Philadelphia youths, charged with stealing accessories from a South Langhorne service station, pleaded guilty to the charges yesterday, and were sentenced. The youths and sentences imposed are: Vincent Morozio, 18, and Robert Keough, 18, one month to three years; David Herbert, 19, four months to three years; Eugene Werkheiser, 19, two months to three years; Keough, a member of the National Guard, is the son of a Philadelphia policeman. Judge Boyer pointed out that owners of service stations and small stores in Bucks County have been victims of many depredations. The quartet also had one fourth of the costs placed on them. The case was investigated by Corporal Smith, Oxford Valley barracks of Pa. Motor Police.

Pleading guilty to an attempt to commit assault and battery on a girl at Penn Valley, near City Line, Joseph McCracken, 26, 2132 North Palethorpe street, Frankford, was sentenced by Judge Calvin S. Boyer on Tuesday to serve not less than six months nor more than three years in the County Prison and pay the costs of prosecution.

least," said Judge Boyer. "No doubt, you have learned your lesson, but other young men in Philadelphia have not learned their lesson and you must be made an example of what happens when a young man attempts to debauch a young girl after taking her for an automobile ride."

"Two things in the testimony of the young woman impressed me," said Judge Boyer. "The first was that she took the license number of your automobile which was the only way she could identify you after you gave her a wrong name. A serious fact is that you deliberately misrepresented yourself and came to the girl's home even concealing your identity by hiding behind a name which was not your own."

"When a man misrepresents who he is and calls on a girl under a false name he is either ashamed who he is or he intends to do something which he wants to conceal in advance."

Corporal Stiles H. Smith, of the South Langhorne sub-station of the Pennsylvania Motor Police, and County Detective Anthony Russo investigated the crime which took place January 17.

The young defendant, who is a sheet iron worker and the sole support of his mother, had numerous character witnesses, including four young women, all of whom testified he was "always a perfect gentleman in their company."

Bride-To-Be is Showered
With Variety of Presents

A miscellaneous shower was tendered Miss Helen L. Booz, Wednesday evening, at the home of Miss Alma Harris, Emilie, with Mrs. Nelson Simon and Miss Harris acting as hostesses.

Upon Miss Booz's arrival at the Harris home, all guests were assembled in the living room which was attractively decorated. Suspended from the chandelier was an open umbrella covered in pink and white. Several streamers were draped from the center to the floor with a gift attached to each streamer.

Games were enjoyed and a delicious menu was served in the dining room. Those invited: Miss Rose Baker, Mrs. Frank Hibbs, Mrs. E. H. Shoemaker, Mrs. William Lovett, Mrs. Henry Lovett, Mrs. Alice Rockhill, Mrs. Abbie Prall, Mrs. Horace Booz, Mrs. James Harris, Mrs. George La Rue, Mrs. Edward Hillborn, Miss Dorothy Lovett, Miss Gladys Wink and Mrs. James M. ON THE SCREENS

It's no compliment to a motion picture to say that it is "almost exactly like the stage play."

The tremendous difference between a stage and film presentation of the same plot is easily discovered by a process of comparison. Take as an example "Yes, My Darling Daughter," Mark Reed's hit play, just produced by Warner Bros. with Priscilla Lane and Jeffrey Lynn as romantic leads, which opens Friday at the Ritz Theatre.

Plot, characterizations and atmosphere of the play have been so well preserved by Director William Keighley that the film version is certain to bring forth plenty of those "exactly like the play" comments. Facts, however, reveal differences in nearly every angle of production—differences which tend to make the picture move faster and be more colorful and interesting than the play.

HOUSE OF DAVID NINE TO PLAY LANDRETH TEAM

Tomorrow afternoon a stellar baseball attraction is to be offered at Landreth Park when the House of David nine will play the Landreth team. Play will begin at 3.30, and it is expected there will be a banner attendance.

"Dave" Landreth, of the Landreth nine, has gone to considerable expense in booking the House of David team to play here because many have requested that the team be booked here.

The House of David team is an outstanding baseball outfit, and wherever it plays there is always a good attendance. It is seldom that the team is scheduled in a community as small as Bristol.

The team will arrive here during the early afternoon and the Landreth nine is eager to defeat the visitors.

Schedule for tonight:
DIAMOND at GRINDY'S
(Grundy's field)
Umpire, Vandine; Scorer, Juno
Result of last night:
Rohm & Haas, 3; Hall Aluminum, 0

"Reds" Gallagher was in tip-top form last evening on the Maple Beach diamond as the Rohm and Haas aggregation blanked the Hall Aluminum team, 3-0 for their third straight victory of the Bristol Twilight League campaign.

In whitewashing the aircraft builders, Gallagher allowed five hits and set down nine via the strikeout route. The only occasion in which he appeared in serious difficulty was in the sixth when with one gone, Stropm and J. Dougherty hit safely but he pulled out of the jam in fine style.

BUCKINGHAM GIRLS WIN OVER BRISTOL; SCORE, 5-3

A trio of tallies in the second and an additional pair in the 5th before the local girls got started was enough to give the Buckingham Doegirls a verdict over Bristol's softball team in a league tilt here yesterday afternoon. The Cardinals, after being shut-out for four innings, rallied for single runs in the last three frames, but were unable to overcome the visitors early lead and so went down to their third setback by a score of 5-3 while the Doegirls concluded their league season with three wins in 7 starts.

OWLS COME FROM BEHIND TO DEFEAT U. MORELAND

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, May 26.—For the second straight time, the Bensalem Owls came from behind in the late innings to capture a ball game. Their victims yesterday afternoon in a non-league tilt played here, was Upper Moreland High, who bowed to the Owls by a 6-5 score. And, in order to gain the decision, the Owls were forced to push over two tallies in the lower 7th to squeeze out their victory with two out after the visitors had gone ahead 5-4 with two markers in the upper 7th.

EXPLAINS HOW DOGWOOD TREES SHOULD BE PLANTED

County Farm Agent William F. Greenawalt has given the following information relative to the planting of dogwoods:

"I thought possibly we should include in this not only information on the planting of seedling dogwoods, but also information relative to bigger specimens in case some of these folks would be interested in taking dogwoods out of the woods and transplanting them.

"Dogwoods are rather difficult to transplant under the best conditions, so that one must exercise extreme care if the operation is to be successful. Ordinarily, transplanting should be conducted in the Spring, before the leaves are out, but may be done in the Fall. If the plants are small they may be transplanted without a ball of earth, but if medium sized or large, should always have a ball of soil surrounding the roots. This, of course, means if the plants are taken from the woods only small plants should be selected. If the plants are secured from a nurseryman they probably have been transplanted several times and have a compact root system which will withstand the transplanting to a better advantage.

"Now for the specific directions on planting. I suggest the following steps in the operation: Dig a hole twice as large as the tree roots or the ball. Dig a hole at least six inches deeper than the depth of the ball.

"As the hole is being dug keep the good soil in a separate pile. The hole should be refilled for approximately six inches with good soil. The plant is then placed in the center of the hole and good soil is packed around the roots. It should then be watered very thoroughly and after the water has soaked down, the hole is filled with the remaining soil. The soil is not packed after the watering.

If the plant has had a ball of earth surrounding its roots, it should not need additional pruning, but if the plant was without a ball, the top should be pruned back one-third to one-half to balance the loss of roots necessitated in the digging.

"Throughout the Summer the plant should be kept watered at all times and may be mulched the following Winter with well rotted manure or decayed leaf mold."

which sucks air into the engine room for the diesels, was left open when the Squalus made its practice dive at 8.40 o'clock last Tuesday morning and failed to come up.

Machinist's mate Alfred G. Prien, who was stationed in the control room and who was charged with closing the air induction valves before the submarine submerged, made an informal statement, however, in which he said that he "pulled the proper valves and closed the main induction valve so that water could not enter when we were down."

"I could tell that the valves were working properly," said Prien, "and that the main induction valve was closed because lights flashed on and the lights will not show up unless the valve is closed."

What Do You Know About Health?

By FISHER BROWN and NAT FALK

Answers: 1. Leeuwenhoek gets a lot of credit for this invention, but in 1590, about forty years before his birth, Hans Janssen began to make "flea glasses." They were considered toys at first. Robert Hooke, about 45 years later, was the first to produce a microscope resembling our modern instrument.

2. A Dutch physician who received the Nobel prize in 1924 for research on the heart. He discovered that certain electrical currents are developed by the heart when it beats, and he developed a device which makes it possible for the heart to write down the way in which it is working. This device is called the electrocardiograph, and its use has advanced our knowledge of heart disease.

3. The Arab of the desert gets his milk from the Camel.
